QUEEN'S PARK HIGH SCHOOL ACCESSIBILITY POLICY

Introduction

The Equality Act 2010, extended to education by the Special Needs and Disability Act 2001, makes it unlawful to discriminate against disabled students, applicants or potential students.

Definition (Equality Act 2010)

'A person has a disability if s/he has a physical or mental impairment that has a substantial and long-term adverse effect on his or her ability to carry out normal day to day activities.' Physical or mental impairment includes sensory impairments and also hidden impairments. In the DDA 'substantial' means 'more than minor or trivial.' 'Long-term' means 'has lasted or is likely to last more than 12 months'. The definition is broad and includes children and adults with a wide range of impairments, including learning disabilities, dyslexia, autism, speech and language impairments, hearing or sight impairment, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, diabetes or epilepsy, where the effect of the impairment on the individual's ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities is adverse substantial and long-term. All those with cancer or surviving cancer; HIV or Multiple Sclerosis are now included from the point of diagnosis.

Queen's Park High School recognises that it is unlawful:

- to treat a disabled student or prospective student less favourably for a reason related to their disability than someone to whom that reason was not applied, without justification in so doing
- to fail to make reasonable adjustments to normal admission arrangements and in relation to education and associated services to ensure that disabled students or prospective students are not placed at a substantial disadvantage in comparison with non-disabled students, without justification for so doing

In order to count as unlawful discrimination, less favourable treatment must meet three tests:

- the less favourable treatment must be for a reason related to the child's disability
- it must be less favourable treatment than that given to another child to whom that reason does not apply
- the less favourable treatment cannot be justified

There are two ways in which less favourable treatment may be justified: either

- it is a result of a "permitted form of selection"
- it is for reasons which are both material to the circumstances of the particular case and substantial (providing that there are no reasonable adjustments that could be made which would make a difference.) A significant number of individuals are therefore included in the definition.

Purpose

We acknowledge our duty towards students, staff, parents, governors and members of the wider community who have a disability. We will challenge and support our students to do their very best in all aspects of school life but in particular through taught lessons, extra-curricular opportunities and residential experiences. In so doing we will take 'reasonable' steps to ensure that both actual and prospective individuals with disabilities within our extended community are not placed at a substantial disadvantage in comparison to those who are not disabled. We will comply with new statutory obligations.

Who/what was consulted?

This policy is reviewed every three years. In relation to significant changes staff, parents and students are consulted to inform the policy. Other stakeholders may also be asked to contribute if it is considered appropriate.

Relationship to other policies

The school policy on accessibility embraces policies and procedures for absence management, admissions, appraisal, assessment, careers education, information and guidance, charging, dignity at work, equal opportunities, EAL, health and safety, ICT, inclusion, lettings, recruitment, school visits, SEND, sex and relationship education, staff discipline and teaching and learning.

- details of the curriculum structure, how subjects will be taught and assessed and the use of information and communications technology will be reviewed and updated annually in the context of accessibility
- whenever an existing student or prospective student is declared to be disabled a review will be undertaken to determine whether there are "reasonable adjustments" which could be made to enable the student to attend the school and benefit from the curriculum and extracurricular opportunities
- where appropriate, the individual needs of some students are met by permanent or temporary disapplication from the National Curriculum
- the procedures meet all legal requirements
- the governing body is fully involved in decision-making processes that relate accessibility development priorities

- the standards achieved by students with special educational needs and groups deemed to be vulnerable including those with disabilities.
